Rules and Form for Employer-Designated Probationary Period Regarding Concordia Plans Enrollment

CONCORDIA PLANS

If an employer has a probationary policy for new workers, enrollment of such workers in the Concordia Plans can be delayed until the completion of a probationary period. However, a copy of the Probationary Period Designation form (see reverse side of this sheet) must be on file with Concordia Plan Services.

If Concordia Plan Services does not have a copy of the employer's Probationary Period Designation form on file, it will be assumed that no probationary policy applies regarding Concordia Plans enrollment.

Concordia Plan Services has established the following rules regarding the delayed enrollment of a new worker due to a probationary period requirement:

- When designating a probationary period, the employer must apply it equally to all of its new workers in the specified worker classification(s). For example, if an employer stipulates a 60-day probationary period for daycare workers, any person hired to be a daycare worker must complete the probationary period before becoming eligible to be enrolled in any of the Concordia Plans.
- If an employer does not complete and return a Probationary Period Designation form to Concordia Plan Services, workers will be deemed eligible to be enrolled in the Concordia Plans the first day of the calendar month following the date of full-time employment. If an employer wishes to apply a probationary period for its lay workers, it will be effective for all designated workers hired on or after the first of the month following receipt of the Probationary Period Designation form by Concordia Plan Services.
- The maximum probationary period for purposes of enrollment in the Concordia Plans is 60 days. For example, if you have elected a 90-day probationary period for other employment issues such as performance reviews, salary increases, etc., the probationary period for purposes of enrollment in the Concordia Plans will only be 60 days.

Probationary Period Exclusions

Probationary periods may not be applied to:

- Ordained or commissioned ministers of religion who are on the roster of The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod.
- Workers employed by employers participating in the Concordia Retirement Savings Plan (CRSP) that are considered Non-Qualified Church-Controlled Organizations by the IRS (e.g., universities, colleges, and most social service organizations).

Important Dates Regarding Probationary Periods

The probationary period begins on the date the worker is hired, even though he/she may initially be hired as part time.

If you designate a probationary period, the full-time employment date used by Concordia Plan Services will be the next calendar day immediately following the expiration of the probationary period or 60 days after the date of hire, whichever is earlier.

The worker will be enrolled on the first day of the calendar month following the full-time employment date. For example: If a worker begins employment on April 15 and completes a 60-day probationary period on June 13, the date of full-time employment for Concordia Plan Services purposes is June 14. The worker is enrolled in the Concordia Plans effective July 1, which is his/her initial eligibility date.

A completed Enrollment Form must be received by Concordia Plan Services within 60 days of the worker's initial eligibility date; otherwise, enrollment in the Concordia Health Plan will not be available to the worker until the next Annual Open Enrollment Period unless the worker meets special enrollment requirements. Enrollment Forms are available on our website under Resources/Forms.

If you designate a probationary period, workers in the designated classification(s) begin earning benefits and have a right to benefits under any Concordia Plan only after that probationary period expires. There is no accrual of creditable service toward a future retirement benefit, no payment of a death or disability benefit, and no coverage for medical, vision or dental expenses during a probationary period.
